Stephany Alexander | Stephany Alexander

In my opinion, the 3 biggest attraction killers that men are guilty of making:

1. Bragging too much and not being a good listener. Many times men try to impress too much by talking about themselves and bragging, sometimes even exaggerating the truth to impress the woman. Although it's important to share a bit of information when meeting a woman, bragging can be a huge turnoff and most women can tell instantly when a guy is full of it.

Listen to what a woman says, ask her questions, be interested in what she has to say because it is firstly about her and secondly about you when you initially meet.

2. Not making eye contact. Staring at a woman's chest or her other assets, looking around the room, texting or fiddling with your smart phone are all huge turnoffs. Your goal is to make a connection with the woman and that is done through eye contact and uninterrupted attention. Anything else feels disingenuous.

3. Do not make sexual innuendos. Don't make sexual comments, don't say anything sexual, and definitely don't touch her upon first meeting her. You are trying to develop trust and this immediately ruins it. A woman wants to feel special and not like a piece of meat. Say something complimentary about her hair,

Ellen T. White | Ellen T. White

1. He talks about nothing but himself. I would cite this as the number one complaint women make. It's the conversational equivalent of masturbation (crass but true).

2. She slowly starts to realize as they talk that his hygiene/grooming is not up to snuff. Alternatively, she may also realize that she doesn't like the way he smells personally (a pheromone thing that he can't do anything about) or his aftershave is overwhelming.

For some women, aftershave can send certain messages or have certain associations that are unpleasant. For instance, if a guy is wearing any kind of Calvin Klein cologne, count me out.

3. He seems to not really be interested in her, the person, but is clearly interested in getting laid. Back in my dating days I had highly developed sensors whereby I could detect whether a man actually really liked me or was just interested in a sexual diversion. Even if I am interested only in sexual diversion myself, I don't want to be treated like that by the man.

The number 1 way a man can build attraction is to LISTEN – to ask a woman questions and to be sincerely interested in her answers.

Many men (most, in fact) have trouble with this. However, I have known dog ugly men who succeed with women on a grand scale by listening. A man who likes to listen to a woman loves women in general, and this is a BIG turn on.

After realising she was a siren at the age of 17, Ellen T. White has made it her mission to teach women how to unleash the power of this famous seducer. Ellen made a systematic study of the sirens among her family, friends, and the seductive women of history and unearthed the secrets to the sirens success in her famous book Simply Irresistible.

Neely Steinberg | The Love TREP

I'd say the 3 biggest attraction killers in this scenario are:

1. The guy gets too drunk.

2. He touches her too quickly or inappropriately before they develop a real rapport.

3. His attention is easily diverted as they are getting to know each other, as in, he can't keep his eyes focused on the girl and what she's saying or he's not using active listening skills. A man who can listen well is a big turn-on for many women.

Jen Friel | Talk Nerdy To Me Lover

1. Talking too much about themselves. I can't stand it when a guy comes up to me at a bar and even if he's attractive just goes on and on about himself. Certainly this works for women as well – but being capable of conversing is definitely a then on.

2. Checking out every other girl that walks by. I get that we are the dad generation but focus for at least the time a girl is standing in front of you. Total pet peeve.

3. Too quickly asking for a number. If I haven't even finished my first drink and you're trying to close – or worse, go in for any sort of physical contact I will definitely walk.

Ask questions and be genuinely interested and focused on the girl you are speaking to. Concentrate on conversing and being present while you are with her. She won't know what to do with herself!

That being said, you asked a very open-ended question. For starters, bars are very visual places since they're usually loud, and fuelled by alcohol. When you're meeting someone in a different type of setting, like a singles event or a dinner party, the dynamic is different, too.

In terms of attraction killers (in general) I guess I can go out on a limb on this one:

1. The worst kind of turn off is a man who brags and talks only about himself — how much money he makes, his flashy car, the scores of women he's bedded and how great he is as a lover and so forth – ugh!

Women are turned on by men who are into THEM and who show that they genuinely will listen and share a conversation.

2. A guy who initially is interested and then morphs into the “walking wounded” talking about his last girlfriend, his ex fiance, his ex (or deceased) wife, and how much he misses her and what a saint she was. No woman wants to hear about the one who came before her. And no woman wants to be the rebound relationship. Come back when you're feeling better!

3. Men who are crude, who curse, who are too physical (hands, hands, hands), who say unclassy things about women and who generally act like animals. No way, No how

If I could add another – men who look cute but when you get up close clearly didn't shower well (or at all) or who have bad breath.

Amanda Rose | Dating Boutique Inc

1. They check out other woman while talking to their date. This is huge, no matter how beautiful the woman is that walks by, don't look! Keep your eyes focused on the woman you're trying to pursue.

2. Sloppy manners and clothes. Image is everything, especially with first impressions. Be polite and be a gentleman. Women love this! Take time to iron and pick out some stylish clothes before heading out. Women love a man who knows how to dress nice.

3. Drinking too much! When you're out trying to pick up women or on a date keep the drinks to a minimum. I have been hit on countless times by drunk men that smell like they took a bath in the liquor store. The slurred speech, clumsy wild behaviour and bad liquor breath are all major turn offs.

Be yourself! Don't try to play Mr. Too Cool. Women love a man who is genuine and doesn't constantly try to impress her. You have a better chance if you are real and open about who you are.

Christie Hartman | Christie Hartman

1. Talking too much. This is usually due not to self-absorption, but to nervousness or a desire to impress. But it's a very common mistake men make. Remember, you want to connect with her, not "impress" her. Get her talking too, and find common ground to connect on. Perhaps you both love dogs or both really want to see Italy.

2. Interviewing / interrogating. Some men, in a desire to avoid #1, ask too many
